

BOOK COLLECTOR SAYS BOOK SELLERS CHEATED HIM OUT OF $200,000

Brings Suit to Recover $200,000
on One Transaction With Publishing Company.

Just as the trial of sellers of "rare" books is coming to a conclusion in the Federal Court, along comes Harry M. Livingston, banker, book connoisseur and art collector, to tell the Supreme Court that in the few years that he has been dabbling in rare volumes he has been cheated out of $200,000. So far as it is known he is the heaviest loser on "rare" books (who has admitted it) on record.

Livingston's tale of woe came to light in the Supreme Court to-day when he filed suit against the Lamb Publishing Company of No. 225 Fifth avenue, its president, Samuel G. Raina, Sol Lichtenstein, secretary and treasurer, and James Plunkett and William Sherwood, reputed agents of the company, to recover $25,000, the amount he claims to have been defrauded out of when he paid $25,000 for a collection of books which, he says, were not worth more than $20,000.

The connoisseur says that the Lamb company is now engaged in selling books which are intrinsically of little value, and fraudulently prevails upon persons inexperienced in book values to enter into schemes and plans to furnish money to buy rare books for prices greatly in excess of the value of rare books.

In 1911, Livingston alleges he met Plunkett, who talked with him a great deal about the profits in rare volumes. Plunkett, it is alleged, represented that he was formerly an expert on books for the Government and was well versed in their values and had made a small fortune in buying collections and reselling them at ten times their purchase price. Livingston asserts that he discovered that all this was untrue; that Plunkett had never been a Government expert nor had he made money out of books. He also alleges that Plunkett was in a secret conspiracy with the Lamb Publishing Company and others to defraud him and that they succeeded to the tune of $200,000.

After Plunkett came William B. Sherwood, Livingston says, and Sherwood introduced him to Raina, president of the Lamb corporation. He was advised, he alleges, to purchase a collection which Plunkett and Sherwood told him could be sold for $25,000. The purchase price was $25,000 which defendant said was a great bargain.

Livingston says he tried to sell the books, but found that was impossible. "In my book dealings," Livingston adds, "I have been defrauded out of $200,000 in this and allied transactions."

In January last year Livingston, whose home is in Barabara, sued the arrest of Edward J. McCardie, a lawyer; William Young Humes and James Plunkett of Chicago on the charge of fraudulently selling him $25,000 worth of so-called rare Americana.
